

HRMAGIX012 - Employee Promotion Policy

✓ Version: 2.0, 28th April 2025
📅 Effective Date: 15th June 2025
🔍 Reviewed by: Rahul R Jadhav

1. Policy Brief and Purpose

The employee Appraisal policy at HR Magix presents the guidelines for advancing and promoting employees for their work. We are keen to invest in our employees and reward those who perform exceptionally. This policy consists of the process that must be followed by the managers while promoting employees. This policy will be communicated to all the employees of the company in order to avoid any kind of confusion about how and when to promote the employees.

2. Scope

Promotion at HR Magix is subject to management's discretion and the overall health of the company at any given time. It is important to understand that promotions are not automatic or solely based on tenure. HR Magix's promotion policy applies to all employees who meet the eligibility criteria. An appraisal may be considered only after an employee has completed 12 months of continuous and dedicated service and is not under any active Performance Improvement Plan (PIP).

Appraisal may move you to a position of higher rank, salary, and responsibilities. Employees are frequently promoted to positions that don't come with higher managerial authority. Instead, these developments could be in the form of a career or position transition that allows individuals to grow and develop.

Employees may be promoted within the same or different department or branch.

3. Policy Elements

In general, promotions will be based on employee performance and conduct.

3.2 Promotion criteria include:

- 3.2.1 Experience and services in HR Magix
- 3.2.2 Qualification for the new role
- 3.2.3 Positive performance evaluation report
- 3.2.4 Ambition and desire for challenging roles
- 3.2.5 Number of memos received
- 3.2.6 Punctuality
- 3.2.7 Job performance
- 3.2.8 Skills and competencies
- 3.2.9 Goal achievement
- 3.2.10 Communication and collaboration
- 3.2.11 Leadership (where applicable)
- 3.2.12 Adherence to policies and SOP
- 3.2.13 Attendance
- 3.2.14 Employee behaviour

The factors outlined above are absolutely unbiased from the employee's and company's perspectives because they can all be assessed and verified. In HR Magix, the managers are never encouraged to promote employees based on their subjective opinions. They should always show documentation supporting their decision. Based on the above elements, the rating will be given based on the employee's conduct throughout the year, and as per the rating, the list of eligible employees will be prepared.

Considering the above statements, Appraisal would never be accepted if they are done on the below-mentioned factors:

- A subjective evaluation of an employee by the manager is not supported by sufficient documentation, such as a job evaluation or any other similar report
- Discrimination of any kind
- Favouritism
- Bribery by the employee or any other kind of inducement
- Patronage or influence of any kind, be it direct or indirect
- Nepotism

To avoid any kind of unacceptable judgments, evaluation managers must keep consistent reports of their evaluation process and should use any marking schemes for scoring employees.

4. When Should Promotions Be Brought In?

Promotions can be done when:

- A vacancy opens unexpectedly, and the company wishes to fill it urgently
- An open vacancy has been identified and advertised, internally or externally
- An employee consistently performs exceptionally, and the manager recommends him/her for a higher position
- An employee acquires a relevant credential that allows them to advance in their career

Moreover, our company has an updated career plan for each employee that shows their possible career path. The managers should take this career plan into account when they are looking to promote an employee.

5. Standard Promotion

Our company conducts a performance review exercise every year. During this exercise, the managers make a proposal to promote the selected employees to senior positions or positions that better match their skills and expertise. If the requirement arises, spontaneous promotions may also occur.

6. Process of Standard Promotion

Managers should meet the employees working under them to discuss their expectations and career objectives for promotion.

Identify the vacancies within the company that their team members can fulfil exceptionally.

This could be by filling current open vacancies or by developing a new office to improve the company's operations.

Ask for approval from the HR/department head/direct supervisors before making any promise to the employee. Also, the managers should get guidance from the HR department for the new vacancy's salaries and the related benefits. Thereafter, they should discuss this with the employees in order to help them make informed decisions.

Managers should always keep a record of the fair evaluation in support of their decision.

These records become crucial when other employees contest the decision, feel discriminated against, or they can even sue the company for such decisions.

7. Career Growth Without Appraisal

Managers might increase employees' duties and influence without officially appraising them. When a salesperson takes over as team leader or a junior coder takes over engineering operations, for example.

Even though there is no legal title change, employees may earn greater pay or allowances for these roles. Benefits are defined by the position and additional responsibilities and are solely at the discretion of the immediate supervisor or the company.

Managers should have an up-to-date schedule detailing their teams' advancement plans and highlight future career opportunities during performance reviews.
