1. Purpose

The Open Door Policy reflects HR Magix's commitment to transparent and flexible communication across all levels of the organisation. Its primary purpose is to foster a workplace culture where employees feel comfortable approaching any manager or HR representative with concerns, suggestions, or complaints. By encouraging open dialogue, we aim to support quick issue resolution, trust-building, and continuous improvement in our working environment.

2. Scope

This policy applies to all employees and all levels of management within the company. Managers, regardless of their designation, are expected to maintain a metaphorical "open door," encouraging open communication in-person or through digital platforms such as email and messaging tools. Senior management must also remain approachable, reinforcing an inclusive culture. HR, too, plays a key role—employees are welcome to approach the HR team with any issue, including serious concerns such as harassment or compensation matters.

3. Policy Overview

All managers should ensure that they are approachable and available so that employees feel free to connect with them regarding any workplace matter. The policy encourages employees to speak openly about their needs and concerns, including but not limited to seeking feedback, discussing problems, requesting guidance, reporting misconduct, making suggestions for improvements, or discussing personal challenges that may impact work.

This policy is built on trust, ensuring that employees can share concerns without fear of retaliation and with confidence that their input will be taken seriously and addressed appropriately.

4. Benefits

By maintaining an open-door culture, HR Magix aims to:

- Proactively address employee concerns before they escalate.
 - Quickly resolve workplace conflicts.
 - Support victims of harassment or mistreatment.
 - Identify and act upon opportunities for improvement.
 - Promote mutual trust, accountability, and teamwork.

5. Manager Responsibilities

Managers are expected to actively listen to their team members, especially when serious concerns like harassment arise. Beyond being accessible, they must act on feedback in a timely and effective manner. If needed, they should escalate matters to their own managers or HR.

Managers must communicate transparently with employees about what actions they will take, refrain from making empty promises, and maintain two-way communication. Constructive feedback should be welcomed, and under no circumstances should a manager retaliate against an employee for voicing concerns.

When unsure how to handle an issue, managers are encouraged to consult HR or senior leadership.

6. Employee Responsibilities

Employees are encouraged to communicate openly but respectfully. If the matter is sensitive, they should try to schedule an appointment in advance. As a first step, employees should reach out to their immediate manager before escalating concerns unless the manager is unavailable, is part of the issue, or has violated the policy.

Efforts should be made to resolve minor conflicts directly with colleagues when possible. Employees must also speak up if they witness or experience harassment, discrimination, or any violation of company policies. A safe and collaborative workplace depends on everyone's participation.

7. Confidentiality and Non-Retaliation

All concerns raised under this policy will be treated with confidentiality to the greatest extent possible. No employee will be penalised, discriminated against, or subjected to retaliation for raising concerns or offering feedback in good faith. Escalation to senior management or HR is always an available option when the issue remains unresolved.
